Poetical.

AN AMERICAN SKETCH.

BY NELLIE G. CONE.

His heart is all of English oak,
His trowsers all of English kersey,
He always rows the English stroke—
And yet he came from North New Jersey.

He docks his horses' flowing tails,
He drives an English cart, with Buttons;
His beard is like the Prince of Wales',
His eye-glass like the Earl of Mutton's.

His satin scarf is oxford blue,
And cut-away his English coat is,
And when he speaks, oh, English too
The difficulty in his throat is.

He calls his cousins' dresses 'frocks,'
And rides upon an English nag
To hounds—although the English fox
Is started from a pudding-bag.

J. Edmonds-Jones he writes his name;
And yet, if you'll believe me, sirs, he
Was known as 'Jim' Jones when he came
Some years ago, from North New Jersey.

HELEN OF TYRE.

BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

What phantom is this that appears
Through the purple mists of the years,
Itself but a mist like these?
A woman of cloud and of fire;
It is she; it is Helen of Tyre,
The town in the midst of the seas!

O Tyre! in thy crowded streets
The phantom appears and retreats,
And the Israelites, that sell
Thy lilies and lions of brass,
Look up as they see her pass,
And murmur "Jezebel!"

Then another phantom is seen
At her side, in a gray gabardine,
With beard that floats to his waist;
It is Simon Magus, the seer;
He speaks, and she pauses to hear
The words he utters in haste.

He says: "From the evil fame,
From this life of sorrow and shame,
I will lift thee and make thee mine:
Thou hast been Queen Candace,
And Helen of Troy, and shalt be
The Intelligence Divine!"

Oh, sweet as the breath of morn,
To the fallen and forlorn
Are whispered words of praise,
For the famished heart believes
The falsehood that tempts and deceives,
And the promise that betrays

So she follows from land to land
The wizard's beckoning hand,
As a leaf is blown by the gust,
Till she vanishes into night!
O reader, stoop down and write
With thy finger in the dust.

O town in the midst of the seas,
With thy rafts of ceder trees,
Thy merchandise and thy ships,
Thou, too, art become as naught,
A phantom, a shadow, a thought,
A name upon men's lips.

—Atlantic.

Select Story.

MARK DILLON'S BOLD GAME.

'I am getting into terribly bad habits, Dora. Breakfast at half-past nine! Just fancy my indulging in such hours three years ago, darling, before the world made up its mind that I painted respectable pictures, and chose to pay me accordingly.'

And young Melville Austin rose from the daintily-spread table at which he and his wife were sitting.

'I hope that you're going to remain at home this morning,' Dora said, in a soft, coaxing tone that well became her petite figure and blonde haired, girlish beauty.

'Do you know, Austin, that you have not painted an atom of canvas this week? There your new picture of Anthony and Cleopatra—'

'Yes, my love,' the young artist interrupted, 'I plead guilty to having shamefully neglected Anthony and Cleopatra; but this morning's engagement will not occupy much time, and I shall be home in an hour, I trust ready to begin work. In the meantime, Dora, if that model of whom I was speaking should make her appearance, just ask her to wait in the studio.'

'I am anxious to see this divinity, Melville. Is she so very beautiful?'

'After a certain type, yes,' the husband answered, carelessly. Then, while his handsome face lit up with a sudden brightness, he added, in lower tones: 'You know there is but one woman in the world, Dora, whose beauty can thoroughly satisfy me.'

For some time after her husband's departure that morning, Dora Austin remained buried in what, judging from the happy smile that played about her mouth and danced in the blue depths of her tender eyes must have been thoroughly aggreeable thoughts.

'Was ever woman so blessed?' she murmured presently, as if asking the question of her own heart. 'Three years to-morrow since we were married, and still the same devoted love from dear Melville. How foolish I was ever to dream that his worldly successes would cool the ardor of that love! Nothing can ever change him—nothing.'

'The young woman has called ma'am, and is now waiting outside. Shall I show her into Mr. Austin's studio?'

Dora's meditations had been abruptly broken by the voice of the stately butler, who stood at her elbow.

'Oh! you mean Mr. Austin's model?' she said a little confusedly. 'Yes, James, I believe your master wishes her to wait in the studio till his return. By the way, James you may manage to let her pass through this room. I wish to see her.'

The man bowed and departed to execute Mrs. Austin's order, returning presently, followed by a poorly clad woman, of whose face Dora merely caught a momentary glimpse as she hurried towards the adjoining studio.

'How beautiful!' the young wife murmured; 'and what a face for Cleopatra. She seemed anxious to escape my notice, poor woman! I wonder if she is ashamed of her vocation? You told her, James, did you not'—addressing the butler, who returned at this moment—'that Mr. Austin would return very shortly?'

'Yes, ma'am.'

James was not absent from the breakfast room five minutes before he again made his appearance there. A rather shabby man desired to see Mrs. Austin. Should he admit him?

But the ceremonious butler had scarcely finished speaking when a gruff voice sounded from the entrance of the room.

A rough-looking, heavily bearded man was standing on the threshhold, directly opposite to Dora who was seated near one of the windows.

'You may go, my good fellow,' the man said. 'I have particular business with Mrs. Austin.'

'Yes—James you—may—go.'

The words were gasped forth somehow from Dora's white lips. If the servant observed the agitation which had suddenly overpowered his mistress, he was too well trained to manifest the least surprise, and quietly withdrew from the room, closing the door after him.

'Oh, heaven! is it you, Mark Dillon? I thought you dead—I——'

She had risen while speaking the above words, but the horse whisper in which she uttered them died to silence before she had finished, and Dora Austin fell heavily forward in a dead swoon at the stranger's feet.

The sound of her fall was quickly followed by that of an opening door at the further end of the room, as Mr. Austin's model, wearing a startled look on her beautiful face hurried in from the adjoining studio. But the stranger's back was turned to her as he bent over the prostrate figure of Dora.

Nor was he aware of the woman's presence in the apartment until she touched him lightly on the shoulder, and in a rather timid voice said, 'Is the lady ill, sir? I was in the next room and heard——

'Heavens, Mark! you here?'

'Ellen!' The man had suddenly turned his face towards the speaker, while still stooping over Mrs. Austin's senseless body. 'Oh, I recollect,' he continued, sternly; 'you told me that you went out as a model, and that this woman's husband is an artist. That accounts, perhaps, for your being here, and you may thank your stars for having so good an excuse. If I thought you had followed me——'

The angry flash of his dark eyes finished the sentence more powerfully than words could have done.

Trembling in every limb, the woman answered pleadingly: 'I had no thought of following you, Mark. I never imagined that you knew this lady. I——'

'Leave the house instantly, Ellen! Don't hesitate a moment, but go at once.'

The woman shuddered and turned toward the door leading into the studio.

'I may explain this matter to you some other time,' the man continued, 'but remember, I warn you against remaining in this house a moment longer than you can help.'

When the studio door had closed behind the woman's retreating steps, Mark Dillon once more bent over the white face of Dora Austin. A faint shiver convulsed her frame at this moment, and while his gaze was eagerly fastened upon her countenance, the silken lashes slowly lifted themselves from her eyes.

'Then it was no dream,' she murmured, horsely, rising from her fallen posture, assisted by the man she addressed. 'You have come,' she presently continued, 'to reveal all to—to Melville Austin.'

She sank back into an arm chair now, with a weary, gasping sigh.

'I haven't come to do anything of the sort Dora Dillon,' the man said, with a kind of sullen emphasis in his gruff tones. 'I don't wish to claim you as my wife. You believed me dead, three years ago, and married Melville Austin; there's nothing particularly culpable about your conduct as far as I can discover. I shall be the last one, depend upon it, my dear Mrs. Austin, to reveal anything disagreeable considering your antecedents.'

'And why will you reveal nothing? Let there be no disguise between us, Mark Dillon. I know your brutal nature thoroughly. You came here this morning to sell your silence. Is it not so?'

'You are perfectly right, Mrs. Austin—or Mrs. Dillon. Which it is to be by the way?'

His tones were defiantly supercilious; his keen, cruel eyes were fixed upon the agonized woman with something of a serpent's pitiless gaze when the prey is within easy distance, and possession has become a certainty.

But Mark Dillion started back with amazement, as Dora answered him, calmly, scornfully, and decisively, in the following words: "I shall not deceive the man to whom I owe all the happiness I have ever enjoyed in this world—the man whom I love, honor and reverence as only a nature like Melville Austin's is worthy of being regarded. When I married him, Mark Dillon, I acted upon my firm conviction of your death. Now, I know myself to have been in error, and a single course remains to me. The instant that Melville Austin returns home, I shall inform him of the truth.'

'Are you mad, Dora Dillon?' he exclaimed, every trace of his supercilious manner gone, and nothing but a sort of furious surprise remaining, 'Are you mad, thus to throw away the position you have won?—to make of yourself a beggarly outcast?—to——'

'Enough of this, Mark Dillon,' she interrupted, haughtily. 'Your game was a bold one, but it proved a failure. Ah, my husband!

Melville Austin had suddenly entered the apartment. Glancing at the ashen-pale countenance of Dora, a look of amazement overspread his own. Then turning towards the stranger, who stood beside the chair in which she was seated, Mr. Austin said, 'It strikes me that I heard your voice raised in rather a disrespectfully loud tone, as I stood in the hall a moment ago. Were you addressing the lady, sir? Dora, who is this person?'

A slight tremor shook Dora Austin's frame and her ghastly frame quivered for an instant She had risen now, and was addressing Melville, who listened silently until she had ceased speaking, stupefied, doubtless, by the dreadful import of what she uttered.

'That man, Melville, is my husband. Five years ago, before you and I had ever met, poverty had reduced my mother and myself to the last stages of want. On my mother's death bed, and while I was still almost a child in years, Mark Dillion asked me to become his wife. We were married, and I soon discovered that my wretched, friendless position had been exchanged for one of still greater misery. I had become united to a man from whose vile, wicked life my whole nature turned in loathing. One evening, in a fit of drunken fury, he struck me. That night I fled from his house. During the year that followed, I succeeded in supporting myself comfortably on the proceeds of needlework. Two months before chance had made me acquainted with you, Melville, I had learned accidentally of my husband's death in France. You know what followed. To-day I learn, for the first time since our marriage that Mark Dillon lives.'

'Oh, God, can this be true.

The words seemed wrung from the very depth of Melville Austin's agonized soul. Staring first at his wife, and then at the moody, crestfallen man beside her, his face expressed the keenest intensity of mental suffering. And now the icy calmness with which Dora had spoken melted to a passion of sobs.

Stealing towards her husband's side, she murmured, brokenly: 'Before we part, Melville, say that you forgive me for being the cause of so much future wretchedness—for having brought to your noble heart a sorrow it has so little deserved.

'Part, Dora? We must not—we shall not part!'

He had drawn her to his breast, with a wild, impulsive movement. At the same instant, the door of the studio was suddenly unclosed, and a woman's voice cried out in clear, ringing tones: 'Mark Dillon lies, Mrs. Austin, when he dares to call himself your husband! I—wronged, deceived, outraged as I have been, am none the less his lawfully wedded wife, married to him seven years ago in Manchester. Let him deny it if he dares. You need not scowl and glare at me,' the woman went on, hotly; 'what I speak is the truth, and I do not fear to utter it.'

A low cry of rage escaped Dillon's lips, as he sprang towards the woman who had spoken. But with a blow of iron Melville Austin's hand hurled him backward. For a moment the villian stared at his wife's protector with a tigerish fierceness in his dark, dangerous eyes, and then, like the coward he really was, slunk from the apartment.

And from the house, too, never entering it again. An hour afterwards his wife, Ellen Dillon, followed him against the earnest entreaty of Melville and Dora.

'He will beat me when I return to him, perhaps,' she said, with a mournful smile on her exquisite face, 'but I must go, nevertheless. It seems like a curse, that in spite of his brutally and wickedness, I cannot hate Mark. But whenever I think of our child at home, I believe this weakness is all for the best. I can guard him against imitating his father; and who knows what a son's influence may do in future years?'

Her sad words left Dora and Melville grave and thoughtful for a long time after her deperture.

'The woman loves him, Melville,' the wife murmured at last, in slow, musing tones—'loves him in spite of all his villainous treatment. What a marvelous mystery love is!'

'Marvelous, indeed, Dora?'

'Did you really mean, Melville, that nothing should part us—not even the knowledge of being another's wife—when you spoke so passionately just before Ellen Dillon entered from the studio?'

Her soft hand had stolen into his, her tearful eyes were fixed upon his own, with eager questioning in their blue depths.

Melville Austin's answer was spoken with unhesitating fondness:—'I meant that, if all the world had striven to separete us, Dora, I should have struggled to regain you. Until to-day I never have known the strength and power of my love.'

His arms were clasped about her now, and she was sobbing forth her thankfulness upon his faithful breast.

WHY PEOPLE ARE POOR.

It is stated on excellent authority, that 'poor have ye with you always.' The remark was true when uttered, and it has been true ever since, and from appearance, ever will be. There are those who have no disposition to save; who take no thought of to-morrow. Having enough for the present hour, they content, and leave the future to take care of itself. If property were to be equally divided Monday morning, before Saturday night the majority would be in destitute circumstances, dead broke, while the prudent and saving would be on the road to pecuniary independence. One class of people spend whatever money they can get hold of, and as fast as they can get it, while with the others same means that come into their hands, judiciously invest the same, and become rich. There are those who not only do not know how to save, but they do not know how to spend. If they get anything it goes for what they do not need; for articles that could be dispensed with. Those who are destitute of the comforts of life, as a rule, may blame themselves therefore. If they have anything they do not take care of it. They buy articles that people in better circumstances would think they could not afford. So they are always poor. Relieve their wants to-day and they are no better off to-morrow. They are bound not to save—to have nothing, and are generally bound to be in debt if they can find anybody that will trust them. Of course we understand that people are sometimes unfortunate. They get sick, or those dependent on them become so. We know that people are sometimes overtaken by misfortune; but where there is one case of this kind there are fifty in which the entire trouble may be found in the disposition to save.

The man who lets his wife or child suffer, from Coughs or Colds without getting "Sellers' Cough Syrup" is lost to common reason.

That, in the opinion of this House, the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States, in retiring from the Presidental office after their second term has become by universal concurrence a partof our republican system of government, and that any departure from this time honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic, and fraught with peril to our free institutions.—Resolution of House of Representatives, 1872.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Ought engagements to be long or short? It has often been said that nothing helps so much a steady young man as the being engaged to the girl whom he loves and for whom he vows to prepare a suitable home. The solicitude of David Copperfield's friend, Traddles, to buy bits of furniture, flower pots and such like for the house where he and his betrothed were to dwell was a pretty thing and much to be commended; but on the other hand it is undeniable that long engagements have their drawbacks, especially if the young people see much of each other during the period of probation. In this case much of the bloom is taken off the poetry of courtship, and no less gilding off the prospects of marriage. There may be a great deal to say against the policy of wedding in haste, but young people who take each other for better or for worse, in all the illusion of mutual trust and admiration, go through a time of ecstasy unknown to those who marry quite rationally. The honeymoons of such pairs are halcyon epochs to be remembered all a life long, and if the after period seem dull and loveless by comparison, yet it is something to have lived for however brief a time up to the highest ideal of feiicity. Besides, there is no little sweetness in having faced the first hard-hips of life together! If a young couple have to encounter poverty, and if they conquer it side by side, lightening all their labors by sharing them and diminishing their troubles by mutual consolation and engagement, they forge links which must bind their hearts closer and closer together. I like to see a smug young man stacking up money in a bank against his wedding day, while his future wife looks on complacently at the operation, as who should say, 'Thomas must earn a good many more pounds before he can furnish a house good enough to lodge me;' but I like still more to see a young husband and wife who have feathered their little nest together. It is pleasant to hear a smiling woman remark: 'We had nothing at all when we married; but see now how cosy we have made our house.' This means that there has been cheerful hard work on the one side, thrift and self denial on the other—in fact, union. After all, the yoke of marriage is an apparatus that should sit on two pairs of shoulders; and there is nothing very seemingly in seeing a girl wait to wear her own part of it until it has been nicely padded with quilted satin.

My advice to young people who must pass through long engagements is to see as little of each other as possible, and likewise to correspond sparingly. Quarrels are easily hatched, even on paper, and they are almost sure to rise if an exchange of love-letters be commenced at the dangerous rate of one a day, or week. This pace is too fast to last. I should say that one letter a fortnight was ample. If this wise abstemiousness from the use of pen and ink be tried; if the loving pair see each other but two or three times a year—at Christmas, at Easter, for perhaps half a week during the summer; and if, during their separation, they remind one another prettily of their reciprocal affection by gifts of flowers, trinkets, nicely hemmed pocket handkerchiefs and well worked slippers in worsted, then the rocky time of a long engagement may possibly be sailed through without accident. Nevertheless, all this leads up to repeating that, when young people have made up their minds to marry, the sooner they do so the better.—London Truth.

A GREAT HIGHWAY.

PROPOSED IMPROVEMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA RIVER.

The secretary of war has sent to the senate the reports of several surveys for improvements ordered by the river and harbor bill of 1879. Among these surveys was one of the Susquehanna river. The river and harbor bill of 1879 provided for an examination of the North Branch of the Susquehanna river, from Wilkesbarre to the New York state line, in order to discover how much it would cost to make the channel of this part of the stream two feet deep at mean low water for the purposes of steam navigation. Colonel J. A. Macomb, of the corps of engineers, was placed in charge of this work by the war department, and he placed it in the hands of James Worrall, a civil engineer. Mr. Worrall has not confined his labors to a survey of the proposed improvement in the Susquehanna, but has presented in his report, submitted to the senate, an elaborate scheme for establishing canal navigation between the great lakes and Baltimore, and diverting western freight from New York to southern ports. He believes that the Susquehanna can be made a great national highway. He proposes to make the North Branch of the Susquehanna navigable from Nanticoke dam, seven miles below Wilkesbarre, to the state line, by jetties and wing-dams, at a cost of $250,000. This part of the stream he prescribes as a succession of long ponds separated by 'ripples,' which can easily be removed. The great national highway which he proposes to have established by the government is to be as follows: From Buffalo, by the way of the Erie canal, 150 miles, to Montezuma; then from Montezuma, by Seneca lake and the Chemung canal, to Elmira; then, by the Chemung and the valley of the North Branch of the Susquehanna, to Northumberland, and then to Havre de Grace, at the mouth of the Susquehanna. He would have the locks of the Erie enlarged, so that boats of 280 tons could pass, and would have the remainder of the route made to accommodate boats of this size. Eighty or ninety locks would be needed on the new route. The cost of this national highway he modestly places at $25,000,000, just one hundred times the sum needed for the work he was instructed to report upon. Of this sum $5,750,000 would be spent from Havre de Grace to the mouth of the Juniata; nearly $4,000,000 from this point to Northumberland to the mouth of the Chemung; from this point to Seneca Lake to Buffalo, through Montezuma, $2,000,000. Additions for various purposes raise the cost to the total given above. The distance from Buffalo to tidewater by this route is 548 miles and this distance can be so reduced that it will be only 20 miles greater than the distance from Buffalo to New York by the Erie canal. All the products of the Susquehanna valley would have gone to Baltimore, Mr. Worrall says, if Philadelphia had not tapped the valley by canals and railroads; but by this scheme he would replace losses of this sort by conveying the products of the great west directly to the Chesapeake Bay. He adds that these improvements could not injure Philadelphia.

Facts vs. Theory.

In regard to the method of coloring butter. The theory is that when cows are well fed and cared for will make yellow butter; the fact is that not one in ten will, except in flush pasture.

This is just the reason that the very best Dairymen in this country use Wells, Richardson & Co's Perfected Butter Color. We warrant it to add at least five cents per pound to the value of white butter, a return of one dollar for every cent it costs.

ETIQUETTE OF LETTER-WRITING.

As a rule every letter, unless insulting in its character, requires an answer. To neglect to answer a letter when written to, is as uncivil as to neglect a reply when spoken to.

In the reply acknowledge first the receipt of the letter, mentioning the date and afterwards consider all the points requiring attention.

If the letter is to be very brief, commence sufficiently far from the top of the page to give a nearly equal amount of blank paper at the bottom of the sheet when the letter is ended.

Should the matter in the letter continue beyond the first page, it is well to commence a little above the sheet, extending as far as necessary on the other pages.

It is thought improper to use a half-sheet of paper in formal letters. As a matter of economy and convenience for business purposes, however, it is customary to have the card of the business man printed at the top of the sheet, and a single leaf is used.

In writing a letter, the answer to which is of more benefit to yourself than the person to whom you write, inclose a postage stamp for the reply.

Letters should be as free from erasures interlination, blots and postscripts as possible. It is decidedly better to copy the letter than to have these appear.

A letter of introduction or, recommendation should never be sealed, as the bearer to whom it is given ought to know the contents.—Hill's Manual of Social and Business Forms.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, Feb. 20, 1880.

Upon the occurrences of the present year depend great results. The Presidential election will determine whether the people are content to live longer under the control of a party of fraud and corruption, or whether they desire an honest government. It will also determine whether the unwritten law of the land, established by Washington and observed by his successors to the present day, shall be effaced from the sacred tablets of traditional custom, and a third presidential term inaugurated. This would be but the first step towards an empire, and if it shall be permitted, we may within a few years, bid farewell to our republican form of Government.

To avert such a dire calamity is the present duty and mission of the Democracy. If wise counsel and concerted action shall prevail, the election of the Democratic candidate for the Presidency is inevitable, whether he be Bayard, Seymour, or Tilden.

But before victory can perch upon our banners, there must be changes in several respects. The great obstacle to our success is internal dissensions. In New York we have the Kelly-Tilden fight. In Pennsylvania Wallace and Randall cannot agree, in Philadelphia Bill McMullin leads a factious crowd, and so it is in other states. Personal animosities are the springs of action rather than love of principle, and self aggrandizement takes the place of party success. In some instances democrats who have not stuck closely to the party ticket are denominated "bolters," and threatened with being read out of the party for kicking over the traces. On the other hand these so-called "bolters" are ready and willing to come back into the fold only when they are tickled a little by being named for an office. We would suggest that conciliation rather than punishment is the proper treatment in the first instance and in the second that party principle is sufficient to hold any true democrat within the party lines, without being rewarded by a party nomination.

All these things must be overlooked and dropped out of sight if we would hold the fort. All men do not think alike, and as free will agents all have the right to do as their consciences dictate, and if some are led to vote against what they consider a bad nomination they ought not to be driven from the party because of this one act; but they have no right to expect to be coaxed back by offers and influence.

In union there is strength; in division weakness. Let us all cast aside any petty personal animosities, and putting our shoulders to the wheel, all work for one great end, the trumphant establishment and perpetuation of the principles of Democracy.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D C. Feb. 17th 1880.

One of the historical eras of the government's financial experience is at hand. The three and one half per cent. refunding bond has been drawn, the immediate words of preparation being confided to Congressman Fryer, of Maine, and will be presented to the House for action. The first section authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to issue four hundred million dollars in bonds bearing interest at the rate of three and one half per. cent per annum, to be redeemable after twenty years, and payable after forty years; also to issue two hundred million certificates, bearing interest at the rate of four per cent. per annum, payable in one two, three, four, and five years after date of issue, at the rate of forty million per year the same to be issued in such denominations as shall be deemed advisable by the Secretary of the Treasury, who authorized and directed with them, to replace all four and six per cent bonds now outstanding. The second section does not materially change existing laws, and relates to funding operations. The third section requires national Banks chartered after the passage of the act to place these new three and one half per cent. bonds on deposit with the treasury to secure their circulation.

A condition of the country which enables us to sell a bond of this character marks an important point in our history. That condition was produced chiefly by the wonderful crops of the last few years, but, every one will admit, in partly the check given to the Republican extravagance by the Democrats who first controlled the House of Representatives in 1874.

The two topics of conversation here, in the absence of business in Congress, are, first the Presidential candidate question as applied to the Republican case, and the same relating to the Democracy. I mention the Republicans first because the fight is livelier among them. It is admitted that the three men who have a chance for the Republican nomination, are Grant, Blaine, and Sherman. No one else is talked of here, and I give their names in the order of the generally conceived idea of their prospects. It may be proper to leave Sherman out entirely, for his "boom" so far, is engineered wholly by Treasury officals and personal friends, and is of that character which never has had success.

Among Democrats there is certainly a gain in Sherman stock within the last month or two.

With Greenbackers General Butler has at present the first place.

These indications I gather from personal converse with men belonging in all sections of the country and from letters received here.

It is but fair to say in this correspondence in which some prominence has been given against Senator Ingolds, that the Senate Election committee is unanimously of opinion that the charge against the Senator of bribery have not been proven, and recommend their dismissal.

HILTON

—Trinity Episcopal church New York, corner Fourth avenue and 125th street burned Feb. 11. The great bellows of the organ exploded with great noise, and was heard over a mile away. The magnificent oval stained glass in front of the organ, which cost $4,000, was destroyed. The organ cost $10,000. The building cost $125,000. The insurance on it is $59,000. The fire originated from the furnaces. The congregation is wealthy and able to re-build.

The democrats of Pennsylvania on Tuesday rose up and captured a considerable number of cities and towns that were formerly controlled by the republicans. Among the important cities that manifest a strong disposition to return to the democracy are Scranton and Wilksbarre in each of which a democratic mayor was elected on Tuesday by the assistance of the labor reformers.—Patriot.

DISTRESS IN IRELAND.

The following circular has been received by us, and we cheerfully give it space in our columns.

WILKES BARRE, PA., Feb. 11, 1880.

To the Newspaper Editors of the United States of America:

Gentlemen:—

In presence of the terrible emergency of famine now passing upon the Irish people, the confusion existing with regard to the various Relief Committees in Ireland, we deem it right to lose not a moment in placing before the American people the attitude assumed by us towards these Committees. We ask you with your usual courtesy to enable us to do this through your columns.

Up to the present, four separate Relief Associations have appealed to this country.

We will refer to these in the order of the dates of their appeals.

The first call for succor was made by us on our landing in America on the second of January. Since then over seventy thousand dollars have been entrusted to us, much of which has been already forwarded and distributed amongst the perishing people of the West, and the remainder is on its way. We may be permitted to mention, as a matter of interest, that our organization was the first on Christmas Eve, to distribute American help to twenty-five starving districts on the Western Coast.

Ours also is the only association which is enabled, through its intimate local connection with the distressed districts, to distribute relief promptly and without cost, and we guarantee that all funds entrusted to us for that purpose will be used solely for relief, and without the deduction of a single dollar for any other purpose or expense whatever.

Following closely upon our appeal, came that of the Duchess of Marlborough, the wife of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

Now in this matter we cannot separate husband from wife, and it must be borne in mind that the Duke of Marlborough is the chief executive officer of her Majesty's Government in Ireland, and is responsible for all its acts. Hence, we find the real head of this relief committee actually engaged in sending soldiers to bayonet the women and children whom he pretends to relieve, in driving them from their poor homes out into the snow to perish of cold and hunger and in seizing upon what little provision they may have left, in order partially to satisfy the exorbitant demands of the landlord for rent.

Information has also reached us from many reliable sources, both clerical and lay, of the biased and partial way in which the Marlborough relief funds are administered; and complaints are numerous that the charity sent from America is being used as a political engine to assist the landlords in driving the people from their homes.

The Dublin Mansion House Committee was the third to appeal to this country. Upon the publication here of the names of those composing that body, we felt it our duty to point out that its Dublin management was controled by persons interested in the maintenance of the landlord system; that several of them had been guilty of eviction atrocities, and that the hands of others were reeking with the blood of the Connemara women butchered within the last few weeks in a happily ineffectual attempt to evict the Western peasantry from their cottages.

We showed that a relief committe formed in such a way could not have the confidence or respect of the Irish people, and that it was cruel to force the starving to apply for their daily bread to the very men against whom they are maintaining an unequal contest for the land of their country.

It is not to be expected that any people should continue to struggle for their rights against a powerful and privileged class, if they are placed in the position of being obliged to beg for charity from the class who are opposing them.

It is, moreover, a remarkable fact that this landlord and government class, while it does nothing to relieve the distress itself, and obstructs all our attempts to do so, is not ashamed to appeal to you and to other countries to do the work which, but for them, would have been done at home.

We, however, notwithstanding all this, expressed our willingness to withdraw opposition to the further progress of the Mansion House Committee, provided the names of the most noted exterminators and government officials were removed from it, and replaced by gentlemen possessing the confidene of our people, but we regret to say that up to this moment no notice has been taken of our proposition.

The latest Relief Fund established has been that of the New York Herald. This journal has been noted for its advocacy of the landlord side in the struggle now going on in Ireland, while it is also fair to say that some of the information sent by its special correspondents, of the condition of the Irish tenantry, has been of considerable importance in informing the American public of the position of affairs there.

We do not desire to assume an unfriendly position towards this journal, as we are aware that its resources for obtaining subscriptions are so widespread that the result of its efforts, if directed and distributed through proper channels, may be of great advantage to the suffering people of Ireland.

But, so far, appearances indicate that the Herald will be guided, in its selection of the channels for distributing its funds, by that landlord bias which has so unhappily manifested itself hitherto in the direction of the policy of that journal.

Before, then, the people of this country entrust their money to the Herald fund, we think they are entitled to ask what agency is to be chosen to distribute it. Up to the present we have been given no information on this vital point, and if the Herald wishes to avoid the imputation that it has joined with the Marlborough and Mansion House Committees in their conspiracy to divert the charity of America into landlord hands, it will at once publish the names of a committee calculated to command the confidence of those who are to be relieved.

For our part, if the Herald selects a committee in which the Irish people can place confidence, it shall have our warmest support and best wishes for its success. If on the other hand, it allies itself with the attempts of the Marlborough and Mansion House Committees, to use American charity as a means of defeating the tenantry of Ireland in the struggle now being made to obtain their rights, we shall spare no effort to enlighten the public as to the true nature of this attempt.

Respectfully,
CHARLES S. PARNELL,
JOHN DILLON.

—Leadville is a place of strong contrasts. The characteristics of a new mining town are seen there yet; gambling hells and barrooms are more numerous than in any other places of business, the pistol and knife are in common use, highwaymen rob the stages close by, and desperate adventures abound; but opposed to these things is a strong desire for law and order, schools and churches are being established, and it is thought that the civilization of Leadville will soon be accomplished.

George Washintons Declination.

Everybody is familiar with the fact that Washington declined a re-election toward the close of his second administration, and the passages of his famous farewell address which bear upon this point have been widely quoted the last few weeks. But no one seems to have recalled a not less interesting fact, which still farther emphasizes the contrast between Washington and Grant in their treatment of this issue. John Adams had not been long in the Presidency before the Federalist party, which had elected him became greatly disorganized, and a strong element were out-spoken against his having a second term. In this condition of affairs not a few Federalists insisted that Washington must except another election to the Presidency. Gov Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut, was one of the most urgent in advising this policy. In June, 1799, Trumbull wrote Washington a letter on the subject, in which he presented the consideration in favor of this scheme.

Washington's reply is one of the best communication's on political subjects which he ever wrote. Oddly enough, it does not appear in Sparks elaborate biography.—The letter is dated at Mount Vernon, July 21st 1799, and, after some introductory remarks, proceeds as follows:

"It would be a matter of sore regret to me if I could believe that a serious thought was turned toward me as his (Mr. Adam's) successor, not only as it respects my ardent wishes to pass through the vale of life in retirement, undisturbed in the remnant of the days I have to sojourn here, unless called upon to defend my country (which every citizen is bound to do), but on public ground also; for although I have abundant cause to be thankful for the good health with which I am blessed, yet I am not insensible to my declination in other respects. It would be criminal, therefore, in me, although it should be the wish of my countrymen, and I could be elected, to accept an office under this conviction, which another would discharge with more ability; and this, too, at a time when I am thoroughly convinced I should not draw a single vote from the anti-Federal side, and, of course, should stand upon no other ground than an other Federal character well supported: and when I should become a mark for the shafts of envenomed malice and the basest calumny to fire at; when I should be charged not only with irresolution, but with concealed ambition, which waits only an occasion to blaze out—and, in short, with dotage and imbecility. All this, I grant, ought to be like dust in the balance when put in competition with a great public good, when the accomplishment of it is apparent. But, as no problem is better defined in my mind than that principle, not men, is now and will be the object of contention, and that I could not obtain a solitary vote from that party; that any other respectable Feberal character would receive same sufferages that I should; that at my time of life (verging toward three score and ten) I should expose myself, without rendering any essential service to my country or answering the end contemplated; prudence on my part must arrest any attempt of the well meant, but mistaken, views of my friends to introduce me again into the chair of government."

Washington's death a few months later put an end to all talk of a third term, but the tone of this letter leaves no room to doubt that in any event he would have resisted all attemps to make him again a candidate. The Father of his Country did not consider it above his dignity to frankly answer the letters of the people who addressed him upon such a subject, nor was he disposed to wait and see whether he might be elected before declaring himself. A greater contrast could hardly be imagined than that between Washington's attitude on the third-term question a year before the election of 1800 and that of Grant on the same issue eighty years later.

Peter Herdic.

HE IS VIRTUALLY DISCHARGED FROM THE PAYMENT OF HIS DEBTS.

Judges Atchison and McKenna have filed an opinion in the United States district court which virtually discharges Peter Herdic, the millionare bankrupt of Williamsport, from the payment of his debts. The court decides that it has not been shown that Herdic has concealed any of his property fraudulently; that he did not commit perjury in swearing to correctness of the schedule of debts filed (it was charged he had ommitted to mention debts aggregating $500,000); that he did not allow debts to be fraudulently proved against him by persons with whom he was in collusion; that entries made in his books three days before his bankruptcy, said entries representing transactions amounting to $1,250,000, were made correctly and not irregularly. On the latter point the court has a good deal to say. The opinion concludes by saying that Herdic ought to be discharged as soon as the usual formalities are gone through with. The decision is final, as Judge M'Kenna, of the circut court, unites in the opinion.

SUCCESS!

The MODEL WASHER

The invention of some method by which the ordinary washing for families, hotels, and public institutions could be successfully performed without the exhausting labor and the ruinous wear and tear of garments involved in the old method of the wash board, and the later process of pounding, squeezing, and dashing the life out of the fabrics, has long been a public desideratum; and impressed with the great necessity that existed for a simple machine that would cleanse soiled linen without the destructive agency of friction, and with the least possible physical exertion, we were led to invent the Model Washer.

It was of vital importance that the method invoked should be of the simplest nature, in order that it might be successfully employed by the most unskilled persons, because otherwise its usefulness must be necessarily limited.

And it was, at the same time, essential to the popularity of such an invention that it should be sold at a price that would place it within the reach of every family in the land.

It affords us sincere gratification to be able to announce that we have succeeded in placing in the market a washing machine so simple in its mechanism that a child may use it, so durable that it cannot wear out, so cheap that the poorest may purchase it, so economical that no family can afford to be without it, and so effective that it is a pleasure to use it.

WHAT IT IS.

The Model Washer is a small portable machine, weighing about six pounds, and can be used in any ordinary family wash boiler. It is composed wholly of galvanized iron, zinc and brass, and hence one of its prominent qualities is durableness; and from the nature of the material entering into its construction, and the simplicity of its mechanism, it is impossible to get it out of order by use. In form it is a circular base, with a diameter of 7 inches, and a depth of 1½ inches. In the centre of this base is inserted a horizontal tube, called the discharge pipe, which is 14 inches high, 1½ inches in diameter, and capable, when in full operation of throwing out 15 gallons of water per minute. Within the base, which is hollow, is located a succession of tortuous passages, so arranged that, by a well-known principle of hydraulics, the hot water in the boiler is rapidly sucked up and continually forced from the bottom to the surface of the boiler through the discharge pipe. The above cut shows how the washer should set in boiler.

In simple language, by the operation of the machine all the water within the boiler is drawn by the irresistible force of suction through the soiled linen, until all the dirt is removed from it, leaving the articles after rinsing, thoroughly cleansed and purified.

The air chamber, an entirely new and original device, invented, patented and exclusively used by us is a special feature of the Model Washer, and an invaluable adjunct to suction washers, by reason of the powerful additional force with which it drives the water through the fabrics of the goods, causing it to search out and eradicate every atom of dirt that lurks within them.

WHAT IT DOES.

It is not as well understood as it should be, that the energetic action of boiling water containing a small per centage of alkali (in the form of common soap) affords the only effective means of removing dirt from cotton and linen goods. It has long been erroneously assumed that nothing short of violent friction produced by hard rubbing in a strong solution of alkali was capable of cleansing cotton cloth. The fact is that the cleansing process consists, not in rubbing the goods, but in forcing the water repeatedly through them after the alkali has loosed the dirt in them. The washer-woman of the past toiled hard to do just what the Model Washer does without effort, viz: force the soapsuds through the articles in the washtub, but with this difference, that she forced the water roughly through them to laborious effort, with the aid of the washboard, while the Model Washer gently infuses the water through and through them, without the least impairing their value.

The Model Washer is especially valuable, if not indeed indispensable, for washing all kinds of fragile fabrics, such as laces, lace curtains, fine lawns, cambrics, &c., which are of too fine a texture to be successfully subjected to the harsh treatment of the washboard. As all housekeepers are aware, it has hitherto been an expensive luxury to cleanse lace curtains, as it could only be done without injury by adepts, whose secret skill enabled them to charge exorbitant prices for their work. Happily, however, the Model Washer has entirely revolutionized this state of things, and made it practicable for every family to perform the most delicate laundry work with the same facility with which they accomplish the ordinary washing of the household.

The Model Washer leaves no longer any excuse for yellow and discolored clothes, which are so often a serious annoyance to families, and which usually proceeds from careless washing, and the use of water of too low a temperature. In washing with the washboard, of course the hands must be plunged in the water, and to render this possible, the water must be reduced to a temperature which the hands can bear; whereas these machines, being composed of metal, retain the heat, and do their work best in boiling suds, and only boiled suds forced through soiled linen will thoroughly cleanse and impart to it the pure whiteness which delights the heart of the good housewife.

Then there is the important labor saving feature of our machine to be considered. The family washing has ever been regarded the most irksome and slavish of domestic duties, and from time immemorial has inspired the whole household with dread. This terror, however, is fast becoming a thing of the past, for by the beneficent aid of our Model Washer a young child or a feeble invalid can do the washing for a large family, in a short time, without fatigue. No rubbing whatever is required. The clothes are placed in the boiler of hot water, and softly pressed down at frequent intervals, to keep them entirely submerged, and subjected to the action of the water that continually passes through them. This is the only exertion required; and remember, the clothes are thoroughly cleansed without being rubbed threadbare on the washboard.

No chemicals whatever are required to be used with these machines. Clean, soft water, or water softened by borax, and a little soap only are necessary.

By the use of Model Washer at least one half of the soap required by the old process of washing is saved. This is an important item where a large quantity of washing is to be done.

WHAT AGENTS SAY.

We have received over eight hundred applications for agencies in three months. Some of our agents are having unprecedented success. As yet we have not received a complaint—"more than satisfied," is the answer they give our agents. We want an agent in every county; if there is none in yours, write us at once; don't delay.

Our agent in Hunterdon county, N. J., ordered a sample washer in December, in less than one week he sent us an order for forty washers: our other agents are doing just as well. Our experience has been, with scarce an exception, that wherever we have sent a sample washer we have secured an agent. We can show several hundred unsolicited testimonials.

The following are only a few of the many letters we have received:

One our Agents writes:

"Ship me at once two dozen washers. I enclose money order for amount. It is the best thing I ever sold. I have called on those that I sold to a week ago, and they say they would not part with it for $10."

An Agent Writes:

"I have made a practise of canvassing every Fall and Winter. I never had an article that seemed to give so much satisfaction."

"Please send me, at once 25 Model Washers. The dozen I bought last month I sold to my neighbors, and I am now going to commence canvassing the town."

The following letter, from a Farmer in Pennsylvania, speaks for itself:

"Now that I have got my Summer work all done, I am prepared to give your business a thorough trial. The Washer I ordered for myself gives perfect satisfaction: three of my neighbors have ordered from me already, and I think I can sell at least one hundred in this vicinity."

Another writes:

"I have canvassed for books during the past three years, but I have made more money selling your Washers than I ever made in the book business."

Farmers and others, who have plenty of time on their hands during the winter months, can earn at least $20 per week selling the machines. It is no humbug, but something everybody wants, and will buy.

WHAT THE PRESS SAY.

From The Methodist, N. Y.

"Denton Manufacturing Co., Nos. 1 & 3 Murray St., have just introduced a washing machine which they have named the "Model Washer," and truly it is a model in every sense of the word. We would advise every man of family who reads this to invest in one."

From Baptist Weekly, N. Y.

"The Model Washer, sold by Denton Manufacturing Co., of this City, is the most complete washer ever introduced; it should be in the hands of every housekeeper."

From Agents' Journal, N. Y.

"Every one of the readers of the Journal who are in the Agency business, are particularly requested to read carefully the advertisement of Denton Manufacturing Co., in this issue.

"The article they want agents for is the Model Washer—the most complete and yet the most simple washer we ever saw. No longer is wash-day to be dreaded, for, with the Model Washer, the wife can do her other work at the same time; it requires no 'elbow grease,' no hard labor, in fact it is an article that, after seeing it work, everybody will buy. Agents should write at once to secure the agency for this."

From School Journal, N. Y.

"Denton Manufacturing Co. is a reliable manufacturing concern, and persons who patronize them can depend on what they represent."

CAUTION.—We warn all persons against using or selling any washer like the "Model Washer." We shall prosecute all infringements on our patent to the full extent of the law. Our patent was granted Dec. 9, 1879, and does not infringe on any other patent.

Mr. Lilly was commissioned Justice of the Peace November 5, 1864, re-elected and commissioned April 13, 1869 and served until April 13, 1874. The sudden and unexpected demise of Mr. Lilly casts a gloom over the people throughout this section among whom he was well known. The bereaved family of the deceased have the sympathy of the entire community in this their sad affliction. His funeral will take place on Sunday.

We are in receipt of a postal, postmarked Geneva, Neb., from an old friend and boy who put some work in on the Columbian desiring us to gratify him in his anxiety to see a paper from old Columbia county by exchanging with him. The writer of the above mentioned postal was William W. Wirt a printer well known to the people of this community.

Sherman & Co., Marshall, Mich., want an agent in this county at once, at a salary of $100 per month and expenses paid. For full particulars address as above. Nov. 21-1y.

On Tuesday last William B. Allen and Miss Lizzie C. Fetterman, both of this place, were united in the bonds of matrimony by the Rev. O. D. S. Marclay of the Lutheran church. The ceremony was performed about three p. m., at the residence of the bride's parents, in the presence of a large number of invited friends from home and abroad. After refreshments were served to all, the happy couple took the 4:49 train for an extended tour. Our best wishes attend them. May they "live long and prosper."

Heretofore very little interest has been manifested by our citizens in local elections, but this year they seem to have suddenly awakened to their sense of duty as is evidenced by the large vote polled. The great number of offices to be filled and the abundance of good candidates claiming the suffrage of the people together with the favorableness of the weather may, however, have had something to do with it.

J. B. Scott's bakery is noted for the excellent bread made there. Notwithstanding the advance in the price of flour, no advance has been made in the price of his bread, and the loaves are just as large as ever. None superior in the county. Try it and see.

A CARD.

In justice to Mr. E. A. Godfrey I desire to say that his being put out of the Opera House on the evening of the 9th inst., was a mistake on my part. From what I have since learned I am satisfied that he was doing nothing that justified such action. I acted entirely on the statement of the janitor, and supposed that I was only doing my duty. I admit that I acted hastily and beyond my authority as an officer.

Daniel Laycock,
Chief of Police.

ASBURY ITEMS.

Asbury is a small village with a Methodist Episcopal Church, something less than five hundred inhabitants of which the majority are members of some Christian church. They are intelligent, industrious and generous to the church and poor. The place is surrounded by farm lands from which the farmer reaps abundant crops of corn and wheat from year to year.

There is a prospect from present appearances of the best wheat crop in this section of the country the coming harvest we have ever saw. Some will say much depends upon the kind of weather we have through March.

Mrs. Peter Eveland is getting some better under the skillful care of O. A. McGargell of Orangeville.

The protracted meeting at Asbury is still going on, T. O. Clees preached Sabbath evening after which he invited those that had been converted during the meeting to come forward and join the church if they wished, or join any other one they saw proper. There was thirteen came and gave their names all of which are young folks. Hope they will all continue faithful until death and then they shall receive a crown of life, for the crown lieth at the end of the race.

On Tuesday night last a party of four or five men, a little full of beer, went into Peter Gross' saloon. They were there but a short time when some altercation arose between them and the bar-tender. One word brought on another and Mr. Gross ordered them out. One of the fellows told him he couldn't put them out and attempted to prove his statement by striking him. A regular melee ensued, chairs, screens &c. being demolished before they were ejected. Such midnight rows should be stopped and the wrongdoers punished.

ORANGEVILLE ITEMS.

Mountain Lodge No. 264 I. O. O. F. will have an oyster supper on Saturday the twenty first of this month.

The Union Sunday School will give an oyster supper on Friday and Saturday the twenty-first of this month. Proceeds to purchase a new library.

The Millville Band will render 'Lady Audley's Secret' in the Academy Hall in this place on Friday evening, February 20.

Those who were looking after township honors, need no longer wade through a foot of mud to ascertain for whom each man intends to vote.

We trust our newly elected supervisors, with the help of the citizens, will fix our Main street, so that the heavy loads of lumber and lime can pass through without danger of being entirely submerged. It is true, that in a muddy time we have the worst roads in the county, and any man who will take it upon himself to make this much needed improvement, will do himself and the town great credit.

On Tuesday, February 10, a number of our citizens with well filled baskets were seen congregating at the house of Nathan Fleckenstine. After waiting here a short time for transportation, vehicles came and took all on board. It needed no stretch of the imagination to comprehend the sequel—another abominable surprise party was on hand for this it proved to be. But who is now the unsuspecting victim? Rev Dietterich an esteemed clerical brother who lives six miles above on the state road. It was surely a surprise. They found Mrs. Dietterich at the wash tub practically demonstrating with her own hands that 'cleanliness is next to Godliness.' Mr. D. being absent with the team, presently returned in the attire of a teamster, which was soon changed for a more clerical one. The Rev. in meeting so many unexpected, yet welcome faces, expressed his surprise in various ways. At a seasonable hour, dinner was announced and the feast began, and progressed with increasing cheerfulness and relish. During this part of the programme, the attention of all was attracted to Mr. D. trying to break a bread roll which did not want to break. Several efforts and a crevice was made which revealed several wooden pins which held the parts together. After breaking the piece the Rev. D's eyes fell upon a nice sum of money which the whim of some of the ladies led to conceal in this way. The innocent trick added much pleasure to the occasion and considerable cash to a depleted pocketbook. After several hours spent in conversation the party dispersed well satisfied with a day's fun.

The Practical American, an independent monthly especially devoted to Engineering, Manufacturing and Building, is the latest journal out. It is published, monthly, by Dr. Vander Weyde, the editor, and will doubtless be successful. The Doctor is one of the ablest editors in American scientific journalism. BERWICK LETTER.

Eds. Columbian:

Mr. K. Adams of the firm Adams & Son is making a short tour through some of the eastern cities, confining pleasure with business.

The process of moving several dwelling houses was witnessed here during the past week. They were too close to the new foundry.

A caucus for the purpose of nominating men for the borough offices was held in Knorr's office last Saturday evening, resulting in the nomination of nearly all the present incumbents.

It is said that among the prohibitions in Salem, Luzerne county, for to-day is included the sale of cigars. The weed there seems to be considered a persuasive argument in the case of obstinate voters.

The planing-mill presents a busy appearance. Judging by the activity of the managers and employees, Freas Bro's are doing an extensive business.

In a recent letter to the Columbian I presented Mr. J. Kurtz to your readers in the role of a scriptural writer. His writings in this direction are rather limited; in fact, confined to the engraving of occasional scriptural texts on tomb-stones. It is a question, then, whether he is entitled to the above colors. He thinks not, and would prefer to have it understood that the subject of that essay for our "literary" a few weeks since, was "sculpture." This society by the way held its meeting on the unaccustomed evening last week, though the flood-gate above were wide open, and discussed the relative importance of steam and electricity. The argument for the former were too convincing and obscured even the light of Edison's invention which was brought to bear on the question.

Is your town afflicted with the Indian? Does he sing his war song night after night on some street corner, and tell your people that he is divinely sent with a compound that antidates all the evils of humanity? Does he tell them of the Valvulae Conniventes, the Receptaculum Chyli, Endosmosis, the Thoracic Duct and all the abominable technical names that throw one into a maze of bewilderment? Even so does this noble philanthropist hold forth among our peaceable citizens; to-day with an elixir sought for in vain by DeLong, to-morrow with the hope of ague smitten mortals, and next week with a soap that has potency sufficient to cleanse a spotted soul.

Berwick, Pa., Feb. 17, '80.

A young man by the name of William Kotz, coachman for Mr. Charles McClellan, came to my store one morning complaining that his feet hurt him very badly, and expressing fears that they were frost-bitten. He had in vain tried to get relief by consulting physicians and had endeavored, without success, to ease the pain by rubbing his feet with snow and ice, the remedy applied in such cases. Being exposed a great deal to the cold by his occupation his feet got worse daily, until one day he fainted in the street. A few days after he again came to my store and showed me his feet. I have seen a great many sores in my life, but nothing to equal this, and was afraid the poor fellow would loose his limbs. He asked me for St. Jacobs Oil; but at first I refused, as I did not wish to take the responsibility upon myself, not being a great admirer of so-called Patent Medicines. However, some friends, who happened to be in the store at the time, begged me give the St. Jacobs Oil to the sufferer; so we rubbed his feet well with the Oil, and he took the remainder with him. After nine days the same man again came into my store, perfectly well, and requested me to write to you of this most wonderful cure; he also stated, that two other persons had been cured of Rheumatism by the same bottle which helped him.

STILLWATER NEWS

Messrs. Editors:

In report of donation last week the amount of donation should read ninety dollars instead of sixty.

Mrs. Stoker, reported sick in my last, died on Monday. An appropriate notice next week.

Returned on Monday from Millville, where I had a very pleasant time preaching to the people of that enterprising town. They propose to build a meeting-house this summer to be free to all religious people who may desire to occupy it for worship. Right friends, go on with it, your community deserves a house for the free use of the people.

Mr. Harry Low of Orangeville, and Miss Lilly McHenry, daughter of Mr. C. B. McHenry of Stillwater, were married on Tuesday, at the home of her parents by the writer. No cards. You have truly captured the lilly of the valley, friend Harry—care for it very tenderly. May your cup of joy ever be full.

The saying, 'awfully muddy,' is still in order—say on brethern.

An Eloquent Passage.—The following is from the gifted pen of the late George D. Prentice: "It cannot be that earth is man's only abiding place. It cannot be that our life is a mere bubble cast up by eternity to float a moment on its waves and then sink into nothingness. Else why is it that the glorious aspirations which leap like angles from the temple of our hearts, are forever wandering unsatisfied? Why is it that the stars that hold their festival around the midnight throne, are set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory. And finally, why is it that forms of human beauty presented to our view are taken from us, leaving the thousand springs of our affection to flow back in Alpine torrents upon our hearts? There is a realm where the rain bow never fades; where the stars will be spread out before us like the islands that slumber in the ocean; and where the beautiful beings which pass before us like shadows will stay in our presence forever."

Fargo City, Cap County,
Dakota, Feb. 11th, 1880.

Mr. Editor:—Having received numerous letters of inquiry from friends in Columbia county, asking information of the Red River Valley of the North, allow me to answer the same through the columns of your most valuable and widely circulated paper. The Red River rises at lake Traverse flows north and empties its waters into lake Winepeg, Canada, through a valley sixty miles wide and forms the eastern boundary of Dakota. It furnishes six hundred miles of navigation from Fargo at the croping of the Northern Pacific R. R. north to the British possessions. The timber consists principally of oak, ash, elm, soft maple, box elder and cottonwood. The Maple, Elm, Rush, Wild Rice and Cheyenne Rivers are tributaries of the Red. No fences required, no fertilizers necessary. No stumps, no stones, soil deep rich loom, easily and never failing. The climate of northern Dakota is one of the most healthful in the world, when I came here last May I was suffering from weak lungs and ague I have entirely recovered from their effects and never felt better. Malarious diseases are entirely unknown here and the bracing and tonic properties in the air is good for weak lungs and consumptives. The winters ere somewhat longer, but much more agreeable and pleasant than in the Middle States. The Northern Pacific R. R., is finished and in operation from Duluth on Lake Superior to Bismark on the Missouri River a distance of four hundred and fifty miles and will undoubtedly be extended to the Yellow Stone next season. Thousands of acres of Government land within from ten to twenty miles of the railroad remain open for homestead preemption or timber culture claims on railroad lands can be bought cheaply and on long time. But land is rising in value very rapidly and in the County (Cass) much of it has doubled within the last year. The immigration this spring is expected to exceed any previous year in the history of the west but should it not be greater than last it will require all the Government land within the railroad limits from Fargo to Bismark. Northern Dakota is conceded to be the greatest wheat producing region in the world. This county raised last year 1,500,000 bushels, spring wheat, ⅞ of which rated number one. The price of the same at present is, wheat $1.17, oats 45, potatoes 75, corn and barley do. equally well but wheat is king and comparatively little else in raised. All kinds of vegetables reach enormous proportions. Some of the most remarkable features of this country are there are no bees of any description, no angle worms, no nut bearing trees or large fruit trees such as apple, pear, cherry or plum. But we have wild grapes plums, hops and straw-berries in great abundance and of the finest flavor. The great Dalrimple farm with its 80,000 acres is located nine miles north of here. He is a Pennsylvanian as is also Grant the postmaster at Fargo and thirdly but not least is Bhorlemaign Tower of Pottsville, who has recently purchased 60,000 acres and proposes to open a rival Bonanza farm, a more enterprising set of farmers can not be found than these now living in this valley. I would advise any one intending to move west and grow up with the country by all means to come to Red River Valley. A failure of crop has never been known and grasshopers do but little damage north of the 46 parallel. Farm hands in the spring receive $20 per month during harvest $40 to $60 and in the fall during thrashing from $25. to $40. Mechanics of all kinds demand good wages but not exorbitant. Plasterers are in demand. I was sorry indeed to learn of the defeat of A. K. Smith for sheriff for a more honorable and capable person for that office does not live in the County. Politics is but little discussed here as Uncle Sam appoints all our officers.

Yours respectfully,
Chas. D. Mills.

—Frank and Charles Tyner, two young miners of Georgetown, Colorada, set out for the Middle Park recently to hunt in the mountains for elk. They encamped near the mouth of the Blue river and played for several days with a large herd in the vicinity. By skilful manoeuvres they at last caught the herd foul, and killed three of the largest elks that could be singled out. But in practicing their strategy the brothers had been led a long way from camp, and darkness soon caught them. In a few hours Frank gave out, and, throwing away the guns, Charles took his brother on his back. The weather was intensely cold and the snow deep. Charles, finding that Frank's extremities had begun to freeze, and knowing that it would be utterly impossible to carry him to camp, dug a hole in the snow and covered him up, leaving only an aperture for him to breathe through. This was the wisest thing he could have done, for had he not buried him in the snow Frank would have frozen to death before relief came. Charles hurried on, procured help and a horse, and at 2 o'clock on the next morning took Frank into camp. In his eagerness to save his brother Charles did not notice that his own feet were frozen. Since then all four of the brothers feet were amputated.

Swindle.—The latest swindle is perpetrated by a man professing to be a census taker, who goes around with a blank for obtaining information, and asks the signature of the farmer to show the correctness of the statement. The blank space over the signature is then filled out with a note for as much money as the swindler thinks is safe, and he negotiates it and decamps.

Sale Bills.—Persons who intend having sales of personal property this spring should get their bills printed at this office for several reasons. First, we give a local notice in the paper and continue the same until the sale, thus giving a larger advertisement of the sale than any other office in the county can give. Second, we do the best kind of work at the lowest rates. We are prepared to print bills, from the smallest to the largest size, in the most attractive styles, free of errors, and at the shortest notice possible. Orders sent by mail will receive prompt attention.

What is in a Bedroom.

If two persons are to occupy the same bed room during a night, let them step upon scales as they retire and then again in the morning, and they will find their actual weight is at least a pound less in the morning. Frequently there will be a loss of two or more pounds, and the average loss throughout the year will be more than one pound—that is, during the night there is a loss of a pound of matter which has gone off from the bodies, partly from the lungs and partly thro' the pores of the skin. The escaped material is carbonic acid and decayed animal matter, or poisonous exhalations. This is diffused through the air in part, and in part absorbed by the bed clothes. If a single ounce of cotton or wool is burned in a room, it will soon completely saturate the air with smoke that one can hardly breathe, though there can only be an ounce of foreign matter in the air. If an ounce of cotton is burned every half hour during the night, the air will be kept continually saturated with the smoke, unless there is an open door or window for it to escape. Now the sixteen ounces of smoke thus formed is far less dangerous than the sixteen ounces of exhalation from the lungs and bodies of persons who have lost a pound in weight during the eight of sleeping, for while the smoke is mainly taken into the lungs, the damp odors from the body are absorbed into the pores of the body. Need more be said to show the importance of having bedrooms well ventilated, and thoroughly airing the sheets, coverlets and mattresses in the morning before packing them up in the form of a neatly-made bed.

—Since his arrival in Havana, Gen. Grant has been enthusiastic in his praises of Florida. According to him, the peninsula will produce within a few years enough sugar, tobacco, and Oranges to supply the United States and leave something over. But the sugar and tobacco people of Havana say that the Florida soil cannot produce the finer kinds of sugar and tobacco. The ex-President, however, is sure that the immigration from New England will remedy this lack, and he depends upon Yankee ingenuity to adapt the soil to the tobacco plant, just as he hopes that Yankee Republican management may may train the voters to appreciate a third term.

BENSONS CAPCINE | CAPCINE | POROUS PLASTER

A WORD TO THOSE WHO USE POROUS PLASTERS. It is a universal acknowledgment that BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTERS ARE SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS.
The great demand for them has caused a number of unscrupulous parties to make and sell worthless imitations under similar sounding names. As the market is flooded with inferior plasters selling at any price it is important for the consumer to know which is the best. It is well known that some of the cheap plasters have been examined and found to contain injurious ingredients which make them dangerous to use, causing paralysis and other diseases. CAUTION—See that the word CAPCINE on each plaster is correctly spelled.

Miscellaneous.

—The puzzle department of our good old State has received a new contribution. It is this: The soldiers' orphan schools have about 2,600 pupils, and there are nearly five hundred applications for admission now on file: whereupon the Philadelphia Times, is moved to say:

"It must be confessed that the supply of soldiers' orphans keeps up pretty well, considering that fourteen years or more have elapsed since the soldiers laid down their lives in the service of the commonwealth. Several years ago it was stated that at about this time the schools would have completed their work and graduated the last of these interesting wards of the State. Since then a new race of orphans has arisen, but where they have come from is altogether a puzzle."

Two Organs.

Regulate first the stomach, then the liver; especially the first, so as to perform their functions perfectly and you will remove at least nineteen twentieths of all the ills that mankind is heir to, in this or any other climate. Hop Bitters is the only thing that will give perfectly healthy natural action to these two organs.

February Work and Plans.

The last month of winter has begun for the northern farmer, while in the Southern states spring has already opened, whatever is to be done in the way of preparation can be no longer delayed. A late beginning makes a late season, and to regain time lost now, may be found impossible hereafter. A farmer who is behind hand is a prey to accidents and misfortunes of the season and the results lessened by the reason of his own carelessness. On the other hand, the forward man gets the benefit of every advantage, and many advantages of the season safely passed over because he is ahead of them.

While the ground is hard or covered with snow, the manure heaps can be hauled to the fields with the least trouble. Those who have profited by our hints for the past few months, will have the manure in a good condition for hauling out now, others who have it laying around loose and frozen, are consequently useless for some time yet.

Manure is made by turning the heap over twice. To do this begin at each end of the pile, and throw off the manure to a distance of three feet, building up the new heaps and placing the coarsest manure in the centre. Then proceed until two heaps are made. These will soon heat, and a month or so afterwards the process may be reversed and the two heaps made into one again.

In many localities spring wheat will succeed if it is sown early. Open weather this month, may permit sowing and plowing although the under soil is still frozen. A cold spell may freeze the ground, or cover it with snow, but the seed is safe, the work is done; and one may rest contented while others are grumbling.

Every farmer should raise cabbages, both early and late. For early kinds, the seed should be sown in a hotbed this month, unless plants started last fall have been kept through the winter in cold frames. Directions for making a hotbed will be found under the "Notes for Kitchen and Market Garden." It is not a waste of manure to use it for a hotbed, as it will be all the better for application in the garden after it has served this purpose.

Plowing should be done only when the soil will crumble loosely; when the plow smears the upturned surface the soil will be injured. While earliness and forehandedness, are commendable, one should make haste with caution.

Grass in the north is not made as available as it might. An opinion prevails that grass lands can not be kept in permanently good condition. Yet there are in many localities plots and tracts of grass that are very old and show no signs of failure. What has been done. A permanent pasture or meadow is invaluable. Why can we not try to make and keep them? This is a subject of most worthy and careful study.

There are localities where it may pay to grow small crops cheaply, where one may skin the land for a few years and then leave it, just as in some places cattle are or have been killed for their hides and the carcasses left to decay. But every year these localities are growing more and more distant in the west, and in time land will be too valuable to be used in so wasteful a manner in central and eastern localities the future prosperity will depend upon the growth of larger crops by the expenditure of more labor on the land. To reach this end will be the work of time, but it will never be reached unless a beginning is made, and there was never a more propitious time to begin than now.

Every relic of the long continued depression—the seven lean years—now happily gone by, is passing away. Prices are advancing, and every purchased thing costs considerably more than a year ago. The farmer who values his land and stock may justly put up the figures from 25 to 50 per cent. His income must be made to increase in proportion, and this must be done to a great extent by increasing in every possible way the producing value of his property.

One Box or six Bottles.

If you are suffering from a combination of liver or kidney diseases, and constipation do not fail to use the celebrated Kidney-Wort. It is a dry compound and easily prepared as a cup of coffee, and in one package is as much medicine as can be bought in six dollar bottles of other kind.

In church is the only safe place to call a man a miserable sinner.

CELERY—The complaints that come to us of the failure of celery to keep this winter show that the trouble is general. "W. H. B.," Waterbury, Ct., thinks his trouble was due to late planting, but as he does not say when his was set out, we cannot judge. But in general it is not necessary to go beyond the unusually warm weather to find a cause. Celery will grow at a very low temperature, and the weather has been for weeks at a time so mild that the plant would grow. Growth in the trenches is fatal, for its roots being out of the ground, whatever growth takes place at the centre, must be at the expense of the other stalks, which become hollow and flabby. Besides this, in such a mass of vegetable matter, the warm weather will induce decay. Lovers of celery can congratulate themselves that statistics show that such a winter as this we are now having is rare.

Doctors and Churches.

The doctors of New York City say Speer's Port Grape Wine has proved to be pure, unadulterated, of a fine flavor and tonic properties, and is unsurpassed for it's restorative powers, and they prescribe it as a very superior wine. Churches use it for communion. For sale by C. A. Klime Bloomsburg, Pa.

Carrying Pistols.

In the case of the Commonwealth vs. Michael Feeney, indicted at Wilkesbarre for carrying concealed weapons, Judge Woodward in the course of his charge to the jury, made use of the following language. His words will be heartily endorsed by all good citizens:

"It may be proper to remark that the carrying of pistols and the selling of pistols in modern times at a very cheap price, is leading to more crime than any other cause in the community. As long as dealers in pistols are allowed to parade them on a pavement in glass cases and show windows for one dollar and a half apiece, young men will be tempted to buy them, and having bought them and put them in their pockets they are inspired by a kind of devil to use them on slight provocation. I am very sorry there is no law to prevent the sale of these infernal and cowardly weapons at so cheap a price that every body can carry them. There is no more use of a man in this community, carrying a pistol in his pocket than there is of his carrying a pound of dynamite, or a carving knife, or a dirk-knife. It is becoming a perfect nuisance.

To soothe disturbed feelings brought on by a cold, and to cure Coughs, Croup, and Hoarseness, give Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, a trial, which may be had at drug stores at 25 cents a bottle.
